KERI SYSTEMS INTRODUCES THEIR SECURELEASE PRODUCT LEASING PROGRAM

Allows Customers to Finance a System Over a Five-Year Period

San Jose, California, February 7, 2003 – Keri Systems has introduced their SecureLease leasing program for access control and larger scale security systems. This program allows U.S.-based customers to finance their security system over a 5-year period without having to fund the purchase and installation of the system with an up-front lump sum. For an average installation, the customer can lease the equipment and installation of a Keri access control system for just $56.95 per month per door, with a $1 end of lease buy-out. The Diamond SecureLease premium package ($69.95/mo.) includes a number of extra services, such as on-line training, free upgrades, and an extension of the 2 year Unconditional Warranty to 5 years. The lease is structured such that the installing dealer gets paid in total 7 to 14 days after installation is complete.

Quite often, especially in the current economic climate, end users who need and want access control to protect their employees and assets postpone or cancel plans to implement electronic card access due to the initial cash outlay required. SecureLease allows them to spread the payments over time, and at the end of the lease term, they can own the equipment for just a $1 buy-out. The lease can also be structured to include the financing of other security system components, such as CCTV, intrusion and fire detection, peripheral hardware, wire/cable, and installation.
